

1. Members of the Library can search for documents by title, author, category and publication year.
2. Each book has a unique ID Number.
3. A book can have multiple authors.
4. Journal articles can have multiple authors, have a title, and are published in a certain journal. Journals have a title and are published by a publisher in issues.
5. Journal articles have a unique ID Number.
6. Magazines have a name and come in issues that are published at a certain time. Each issue of a magazine has a title. Magazine issues have editors and contributors.
7. Members can borrow documents and the systems will store the date that they borrowed the document.
8. Fines can be imposed on members if documents are not returned on the due date.
9. Library staff can see who borrowed a particular document, who has checked out a document in the past when members have joined and the status of a member.
10. Library staff can add, delete or modify documents.

